BROADWAY. The Brondway Bridge Ordered to Be Re-moved.

SUPREME COURT—DECISION OF JUDGE DANIELS.

Charles Knoz against The Mayor, &c., of the City Of New York.—The plaintiff brought this suit as an action in equity for the removal and abatement of what he complains of as a public nuisance, specially injurious to himself. It appears from the complaint, as well as the evidence given on the trial of the ac-tion, that the plaintiff is lessee for a term of years of the premises affected by the structure complained of, and that he has erected upon them a valuable building at an expense of $75,000. This building is situated upon the northeasterly corner of Fulton street and Broadway, and has been and is now occupied in part by the plaintiff as a store and in part it has been leased out to and occupied by his under tenants. In the outset of the trial the defendant objected that the plaintiff could not maintain this action for the abatement of the structure in controversy as a nuisance, because he did not own an estate in fee in the premises affected by it, and authorities were produced showing that such was the rule which prevailed in courts of law upon this subject. Under that rule the plaintiff's remedy at law, as a tenant merely, would be that of a special action on the case, as it was called before the code, action on the case, as it was called before the code, for the recovery of damages. And such actions could be brought if the plaintiff should prove to be entitled to maintain them from time to time, as the damages he might sustain would justify a resort to them during the continuance of the cause producing them. Under that rule he would be bound to submit to the continuance of the wrong for such time as his interest in the leasehold premises continued, if the public authorities should maintain it as long as that. The only other remedy open to him would be that enjoyed by him, in common with every other member of the community, of indicting the defendant for a misdemeanor committed by the act of creeting and maintaining a common nuisance, act of erecting and maintaining a common nuisance, and that would be subject to embarrassments and obstacles that it is not now necessary to enumerate. It is sufficient to say that he was not bound to resort to that proceeding even if the structure in contro-versy could be clearly established to constitute a common nuisance. The fact that he could, as a ten-ant of the premises which it is complained are ineommon nuisance. The fact that he could, as a tenant of the premises which it is complained are injured, maintain only actions at law for damages, and that such actions would have to be from time to time repeated, as the damages might continue to accrue, without resulting in the removal of the structure itself, is sufficient to entitle the plainting to bring his action in this court as a court of equity. It is so for three reasons. First, that he has no adequate remedy at law; secondly, to prevent a multiplicity of actions, and thirdly, to prevent irreparable injury by the continuance of the nuisance itself, (2 Story's Eq.; Jur., section 924, Spencer vs. London and Birmingham Raiiroad Co.; s Simons, 193; Sampson vs. Smith, id., 272; Ripon vs. Hobart, 3 Myine & Keen, 169; Catlin vs. Valentine, 9, page 575) A complete and adequate remedy in cases of nuisances in favor of all persons specially injured by them when they are of a public nature can be administered in this court unembarrassed by the technical rules prevailing upon the subject in courts of law. And if the complaint made by the plaintiff shall prove to be well founded he has presented such a case as for the reasons already mentioned may be properly redressed by this court as a Court of Equity. The structure which the plaintiff in this action alleges has been erected, and is now maintained by the defendant in violation of his rights as the tenant and occupant of the premises mentioned, is a bridge elevated at the heights of eighteen feet over the junction of Fulten street and Broadway. This bridge is reached by stairs provided for that purpose are each of its corners, resting upon the side walk on Breadway. They extend to such a distance along the sitewalks from the sides of the top of the bridge as to Ngord proper means of ascending to and descending from the bridge itself. In front of the punnitiff's store the sidewalk is districted feet in Arith, and the stairs to the bridge laye been so constructed

A concern per ma hard the same. Incidental to this and as a necessary part of it the public possess the right of rendering the street as convenient, useful, commodous, safe and wholesome as it can be by means of such improvements and regulations as experience has discovered to be adapted to those ends. To accomplish those results it may be granded, curbed, paved and sewered and provided with the requisite mannier in which excavations may be made or maintained in or under it may be suitably and safely controlled by the public authorities having charge of the easement for the benefit of the public. But all this is done and permitted for one end and purpose, and that is to render the streets as convenient, safe, useful and wholesome as they may be for those having occasion to use them for the purpose of passing over them. Many other improvements in this respect may and undoubtedly will be discovered and hade to increase the safety and facilities or the public in the use of the street, ments like the one in controversy will be found to have sufficient tendency in that direction to justify a repetition of it. Beyond this right of improving and requising the manner in which the streets may be used, where the public have acquired only the easement secured by the dedication the public have no right to make use of the land over which the streets may be used, where the public have acquired only the easement secured by the dedication the public have no right to make use of the land over which the streets may be used, where the public have acquired only the easement secured by the dedication the public have no right to make use of the statutes were themselves capable of being so construed, which extrest may be asset to the sto

What exasperates still more the friends of civilization in the East, and at the same time the admirent of the worthy Halim Pacha, is the circumstance that, not satisfied with having made this prince the victum of all sort and manner of snares, the Viceroy determined to drive him from his palace of Choubra, celebrated on account of its beautiful and extensive pleasure grounds, and the resort of all visitors of Cairo. As Halim declined to leave a palace which belongs to him and which the Viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the propose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of the viceroy wishes to despoil him of for the purpose of converting it into his harem, his Highness orders the road leading to the palace to be destroyed, thus not only vitually making his uncle a prisoner in his own house, but also running the neighboring farmers, whose produce is thus deprived of the only road that brings it to the market and realizes its value.

This matter has created a painful sensation, and all the representatives of the foreign Powers are indignant against the Viceroy; but who unfortunately is supported by certain pachas who rose to power from the lowest strata of society, and who are bent on the ruin of Halim Pacha because he sets the example of progress and civilization, his palace being filled with agricultural and industrial machinery, while their palaces and that of the Viceroy of t

A SHREWD FORGERY IN KANSAS.

A SHREWD FORGERY IN KANSAS.

[From the Topeka (Kansas) Record, July 12.]
On the 25th of June a letter came to the Topeka Post Office directed to "Henry Johnson, Jr., care of Kansas Valley National Bank." It was taken to the bank and put in the safe, as is usual when letters come in that way. On the 2d of July a man dressed like a larmer came into the bank and inquired if there was a letter for Henry Johnson, Jr., and said that he was the man. Before the letter was delivered he mentioned incidentally that he had lately purchased a farm near St. Mary's Mission, and that his father lived in Atchison, and that he had written him to send it to the care of the Kansas Valley National Bank, because it was the nearest place where he could get a check cashed. The letter was delivered and he opened it in the presence of the President, and it contained check on the First National Bank at Atchison, signed Henry Johnson, Sen., for $350, which was certified to by W. R. Stebbins, the cashler, as being good. Mr. Adams unhesitatingly cashed the check, as it was evident that the signature of Mr. Stebbins was genuine, it being a perfect fac simile of his handwriting, with which the President was perfectly facilities. The check was sent for collection in due course, and yesterday word came back that the signature of Mr. Stebbins was a forgery, and that no such man as Johnson was known in Atchison.
